

Contents

vii	Contributors
1	Introduction: Problems and Paradoxes in the History of Criticism PHILIP SMALLWOOD
13	Literary History, Critical History, and the Question of “Medieval” Theory STEPHEN PENN
37	Abandoning Theory: Towards a Social History of Critical Practices PAUL TROLANDER AND ZEYNEP TENDER
51	On (Not) Writing Literary and Critical History: Dryden’s Preface to Fables, Ancient and Modern TOM MASON	v
75	To “Value Still the True”: Pope’s Essay on Criticism and the Problem of the Historical Mode PHILIP SMALLWOOD
95	Johnson’s Lives and the Genealogy of Late Eighteenth-Century Literary History APRIL LONDON
115	History and the New Historicism: Symbol and Allegory as Poetics of Criticism GAVIN BUDGE
145	“With Love and Wonder”: Empson, Donne, and Milton ADAM ROUNCE

171	Truth, Aesthetics, History ROBERT EAGLESTONE
187	The End of Criticism: Literary Criticism, Economics, and Management Discourse GARY DAY
209	Index

Contributors

GAVIN BUDGE is Lecturer in English at the University of Central England and co-founder of the Midlands Romantic Seminar. He is involved in a project to develop an electronic edition of the Quarterly Review and is currently editing e-texts of the first two volumes to be made available via the Romantic Circles website. He acted as supervising editor on "Aesthetics" for the Dictionary of Nineteenth Century British Philosophers (2002).

GARY DAY is a Principal Lecturer in English at De Montfort University. He is the author of two monographs, Re-Reading Leavis: "Culture and Literary Criticism" (1996) and Class (2001). He is at present writing Literary Criticism: A Polemical History. He has also contributed to The Cambridge History of Literary Criticism and has published on the relationship between literary criticism and management discourse. His most recent work is an edited collection on D. H. Lawrence, The Rainbow and Women in Love and he is a regular contributor to, and reviewer for, The Times Higher Education Supplement.

vii

ROBERT EAGLESTONE teaches at Royal Holloway College, University of London, and works on contemporary and twentieth-century literature, literary theory, and philosophy. His publications include Ethical Criticism: Reading after Levinas (1997), Doing English (1999, 2nd ed. 2002), Postmodernism and Holocaust Denial (2001), and articles on contemporary European philosophy, Samuel Beckett, Angela Carter, ethics, science, the Holocaust, archaeology, and historiography. He is currently working on the Holocaust and the Postmodern, on literature, history, and philosophy after the "Final Solution." He is a literary advisor to the British Council and on the Executive of the Forum for European Philosophy. He is the series editor of Routledge Critical Thinkers.

APRIL LONDON is Professor of English at the University of Ottawa and author of Women and Property in the Eighteenth-Century English Novel (1999). She has published articles on the novel and history, late eighteenth-century utopias, the Tradescants, Sarah Fielding, John Hill, S. J. Pratt, Samuel Richardson, Ann Radcliffe, Henry Fielding, Arthur Young, Jane West, Henry Mackenzie, early eighteenth-century narrative, disease and the novel, biographies of eighteenth-century women novelists, anti-Jacobin satire, and Edward Bancroft. Her current research is concerned with relations between the eighteenth-century novel and literary history.

TOM MASON teaches English literature at the University of Bristol. He is the author (with David Hopkins) of The Story of Poetry (1992), and co-editor, with David Hopkins, of Abraham Cowley: Selected Poems (1994). He has written essays and articles on Cowley, on Dryden's poetry, on Pope, and on Johnson's criticism, and is currently completing a study of poetry and criticism from Milton to Wordsworth.

STEPHEN PENN is Lecturer in English Studies at the University of Stirling. He has written articles on medieval Latin, late-medieval English literature (especially Chaucer), medieval literary theory, and John Wyclif. He is currently working on a collection of translations of selected Latin texts by Wyclif.

ADAM ROUNCE teaches English literature at the University of Bristol. He has written on Dryden, Johnson, Cowper, and Akenside and has recently edited a selection of Charles Churchill's poetry. He is the editor of a reprint of responses to Alexander Pope and is writing a book on poetry from Pope to Wordsworth.