Aperçus: Histories Texts Cultures

a Bucknell series

Series Editor: Greg Clingham

Aperçu (apersü). 1882. [Fr.] A summary exposition, a conspectus.

Relations among historiography, culture, and textual representation are presently complex and rich in possibilities. Aperçus is a series of books exploring the connections between these crucial terms. Revisionist in intention, Aperçus seeks to open up new possibilities for humanistic knowledge and study, and thus to deepen and extend our understanding of what history, culture, and texts have been and are, as these terms are made to bear on each other by new thinking and writing.

MY THANKS ARE DUE NOT ONLY TO THE CONTRIBUTORS TO THIS volume but also to Dominick LaCapra and David Armitage who, along with Colin Kidd, delivered lectures on this topic of “History and Nation” as part of the Social Science Colloquium at Bucknell University in 2002–2003. This volume is an outgrowth of that lecture series and I am grateful to Jim Rice, Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs and Development at Bucknell, for providing the funding and institutional support necessary for organizing such a series. My thanks are also due to my colleagues in the History Department at that time, especially Leslie Patrick and Richard Waller, who provided intellectual and moral support and were vital participants in the series. Finally, Greg Clingham first approached me about organizing a lecture series and editing this subsequent volume for Bucknell University Press, and he has offered much encouragement and excellent advice. I’m very glad to have had the opportunity to get to know him not only as an editor but also as a friend and colleague in the course of preparing this volume.

Two of the essays included here appeared first in earlier collections: Jorge Cañizares-Esguerra, “Whose Centers and Peripheries? Eighteenth-Century Intellectual History in Atlantic Perspective,” in The Atlantic World: Essays on Slavery, Migration and Imagination, eds. Wim Klooster and Alfred Padula (Prentice Hall, 2005) and J. G. A. Pocock, “The Treaty Between Histories,” in Histories, Power and Loss: Uses of the Past—a New Zealand Commentary, eds. Andrew Sharp and Paul McHugh (Bridget Williams Books, Wellington, 2001). They are reprinted here, with some minor changes, by the kind permission of the original publishers.
